Compensation

Competitive salaries are vital to bringing you and your accomplished colleagues to Gundersen – and keeping you here to serve our patients and communities. Your salary aligns with the national benchmarks within your specialty at similar organizations. Pay structures and processes are designed to be fair and equitable, align with the value of services provided and provide financial stability. The key factors used to determine compensation are:

Patient care work

Individual performance outcomes

Market salary benchmarks

You can influence your compensation in two primary ways:

Work performed
serving patients

and

How you conduct other aspects of your job

How COMPENSATION is Determined

Compensation is determined each year based on previous calendar year productivity and performance metrics. This process includes review and input from Department Chairs, Medical Vice Presidents and the Medical Executive Committee, and requires approval from the Board. The specific calculation and inputs vary by specialty and include review and input by physician leadership each year. In addition to individual production and performance outlined below, organizational performance to budget is also factored in to determine a final salary.

Individual Production	Individual Performance
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The majority of compensation plans incorporate the following into salary calculations: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> + wRVUs are used as the basis for production. + Production is prorated by average yearly patient care FTE. + National benchmarks are used to match production percentile to salary. (E.g., If one consistently produces at the 80th percentile, then the objective is to pay at the 80th percentile of market.) Hospital-based department start points are usually based on national benchmarks rather than primarily productivity. Compensation plans may be individual-based or team-based. Compensation plans may also include value-based metrics such as patient experience quality and panel size. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Associate/professional staff contributions are also evaluated to determine potential adjustments. These vary by specialty and commonly include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> + Quality + Teaching contributions and research + Committee involvement + Timely completion of medical records in accordance with organizational policies + Department citizenship, interpersonal conduct and patient experience + Non-patient care administrative roles Compensation plans incorporate salary safeguards to limit reductions and/or salary ceilings to protect against claims of private inurement.
